The following categories describe different ways that we use and disclose health information. For each category of uses or disclosures we will explain what we mean and try to give some examples. Not every use or disclosure in a category will be listed. However, all of the ways we are permitted to use and disclose information will fall within one of the following categories:

We may use your health information to provide you with health treatment or services. We may disclose your health information to doctors, nurses, counselors, health care students, or other persons providing health services to you. This information would be useful in selecting the most appropriate medication or course of treatment for you. Different programs of the agency may share your health information in order to coordinate the different things you need, such as prescriptions, and lab work. For Health Care Operations

We may use and disclose your health information for operational purposes. These uses and disclosures are necessary to operate the agency and make sure that all of our patients, clients, and participants receive quality care. For example, we may use health information to review our treatment and services and to evaluate the performance of our staff in caring for you. We may also combine health information about many agency patients, clients, and participants to decide what additional services the agency should offer, what services are not needed, and whether certain new treatments are effective. We may also disclose information to doctors, nurses, counselors, health care students, and other agency personnel for review and continuous quality improvement purposes. We may also combine the health information we have with health information from other agencies to compare how we are doing and see where we can make improvements in the care and services we offer.
